More than a million people attended a memorial service in Israel on Sunday to mourn the victims of the deadliest terror attack in the country's history, even as signs emerged of the struggle ahead. Hours after a Palestinian rammed his car into a bus stop in Jerusalem, killing 15 people, Israel declared three days of mourning across the country, making it the first Arab-majority country to extend such official mourning in the wake of a major terror attack. Sunday's memorial service was attended by Prime Minister Benjamin Netanyahu, whose wife Sara, who was in the car with him at the time of the attack, is in a hospital after suffering a fractured skull and a concussion. occupied Palestinian land in the West Bank. The prime minister was joined at the ceremony at Jerusalem's Mount Herzl military cemetery by other top Israeli officials, including Education Minister Naftali Bennett, Housing Minister Yoav Galant, Justice Minister Ayelet Shaked, former Defence Minister Moshe Yaalon and head of the Yad Vashem Holocaust memorial Avner Shalev. Several ministers attended the service, including Gilad Erdan, Minister of Internal Affairs; Tzahi Hanegbi, Minister of Education; and MK Moshe Feiglin, head of the free-nationalist Gush Emunim party. Bennett, who has become a prominent figure on the right in recent years, spoke about the moment he saw the car hit the bus stop in Jerusalem and heard the crash, telling the packed hall, "The car ran into the bus stop. We ran to the bus stop and there was a smell of blood." He said, "There is blood. You can see the blood." His wife, Tzipi Bennett, later told Israeli media that she had heard a crashing sound and was told that an ambulance was on its way. The wife of Israeli-Arab lawmaker Ayman Odeh, Ayelet, was also at the ceremony. The 29-year-old Odeh was also in the car that hit the bus and is being treated for moderate wounds.
